A NEW DEPARTURE!
BEST PLOW IN THE WORLD!

THE SYRACUSE CHILLED PLOW CO.
of Syracuse, N. Y.

Are now putting on the market a Plow that is as much superior to any Plow heretofore made as the Plows of the past few years have been superior to those made half a century ago.

It combines all the excellencies of any Plow in use.

It obviates all the objections made to any other Plow.

In addition it embraces several new features of the greatest value, for which we have obtained exclusive Patents.

Its Beam, Clevis, Jointer standard and Wheel Standard will be STEEL, and its mold board will be a composition of Steel and Iron chilled under a process for which we have also obtained an exclusive Patent. It will be called

THE SYRACUSE CHILLED STEEL PLOW

Its weight will be eighteen pounds less than our present styles.

A Jointer on Steel Plow, made in the ordinary way, but ripped, retails for twenty-two dollars. Jointer Steel Plows retail from sixteen to nineteen dollars.

The price of our new Plow will be but Seventeen Dollars, and it will be the cheapest Agricultural Implement ever sold.

Its mold board will outwear three of the very best kinds of the ordinary cast mold boards.

It will scour in soils where all steel plows and all other plows have hitherto proved a failure.

With this Plow will be furnished a corrugated Plow Point and Jointer Point, on which we have also obtained a Patent, and which is also a great improvement, both as regards strength and wear.

The Jointer can be shifted so as to take more or less land, and also more or less pitch, and it can always be kept on a line with the Plow.

The wheel will run under the beam or one side of it as desired, and always kept in line.

The beam is adjustable for Spring or Fall Plowing, and also for two or three horses.

The handles can be adjusted to accommodate a man or boy, on the same Plow.

It is a perfect Plow.

Wooden boards are going out of use because they shrink, swell and warp, and never run two seasons alike.

Iron boards are too heavy.

Malleable beams become demoralized and boys, while it is much worse than to break.

A Steel beam is the necessity of the day. It is three times as strong and very much lighter than any other style.

When we say a Mold board is chilled, the farmers know it is so.

We do not palm off on them a composition of various metals and call it chilled metal.

We want agents for this new Plow in every town in the States.

We can give but a very small discount to them, but we will pay the Railroad Freight.

We propose to place this Plow in the hands of Farmers as near the cost of manufacture as possible.

It will be the best Agricultural Implement ever sold.

It shall also be the cheapest.

Persons therefore who are not willing to act as agents on the principle that "a nimble sixpence is better than a slow shilling," need not apply for an agency.

No Plows on commission. All sales absolute.

☞ This is the only Steel Chilled Plow in the World.

Steel costs several times more than Iron.

But this Plow, full rigged, by giving small discounts, can be sold for Seventeen Dollars. Compare this price with that of any Iron Plow ever made.

It is cheaper than any other Plow now made would be at five dollars and a half.

Where there are no agents we will, on receipt of Seventeen Dollars, send a Plow to any Railroad station in the State and pay the freight. Address,

SYRACUSE CHILLED PLOW CO.

Poetical.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

It might have been! When life is young
And hopes are bright, and hearts are strong
To battle with the heartless throng,
When youth and age are far between,
Who hears the words so sadly sung?
It might have been!

It might have been! When life is fair,
Youth stands beside the boundless sea
That ebbs and flows unceasingly,
And dreams of name and golden fame;
And who shall flout the To Be
That's dawning there?

It might have been. When life is bright,
And love is in its golden prime,
Youth rocks not of the coming night,
Nor dreams that there may be a time
When love will fail, or change or die
Eternally!

It might have been! When time grows gray,
And spring-tide's hopes have passed away,
Old age looks back on by-gone years—
Their many doubts and wants and fears;
And through the mist away is seen,
The might-have-been!

It might have been! When age so sad,
Weary of waiting for the time
That, aiser all, is but a name,
When life has lost the name it had,
True knowledge makes regret more keen—
It might have been!

It might have been! When youth is dead,
And love that was so fair is fled,
When all the mockeries of the past
Have lost their tinsel rags at last,
The one true love is clearly seen
That might have been!

It might have been! Ah me! Ah me!
And who shall tell the misery
Or knowing all that life has lost?
By thinking of the countless cost
Poor comfort can the sad heart glean!
It might have been!

It might have been! Nay, rather rest
Believing what has been is best!
The life whose sun has not yet set
Can find no room for vain regret,
And only crowns its queen
It might-have-been.

Select Story.

AFTER LONG YEARS.

'What is this Bart?'

'That is the mortgage of an estate called the Derby Place, Mr. Faxon, foreclosed more than a year, I believe.'

'Well, it's what I've been looking for. I will take charge of the papers and attend to the matter soon. Down East, isn't it?

'Yes, sir.'

Mr. Faxon put the papers into the breast-pocket of his coat, came down the office stairs, stepped into the glittering, purple-lined phaeton, beside his wife.

The delicate Arabian, Mrs. Faxon's horse, sped away out of the city confines, and soon tossed his jetty mane along the open roads, lined with gardens, ornate cottages and villas.

'Going away again to-morrow, dear' asked Mrs. Faxon, suddenly lifting her fair countenance, as she interrupted her husband. 'You seem to be away all the time lately. Take me with you.'

'Not this time, Violet.'

And Violet Faxon's husband fell in to a fit of abstraction, from which the smartest chatter failed to arouse him.

They came at last to the Faxon mansion, grand and simple, and fulfilling the promise of a beautiful interior.

Amid the white lace and crimson silk of her chamber, Violet was brushing out her long, fair hair, when her husband paused in the doorway, and looked at her sharply. Then he came slowly across the room and looked closely at the rose-ate cheek, pearly ear and curved lashes.

'What is it?' asked Violet—'a freckle?'

'No,' he answered, smiling faintly and strolling across the chamber. 'You looked like my sister then—that was all.'

'Your sister, dear? You never told me about her!' said Violet.

'No,' he answered, and said no more.

Mr. Faxon bore no resemblance to his delicate patrician wife. A little less than thirty—dark, strongly built, active, vigorous, he impressed one as a strong character. If, with a remarkably rich comeliness of countenance, there was also a certain evidence of strong good sense and a look of deep experiences, Mr. Faxon looked like a man who carried weight.

He was up and away at daybreak the next morning. An early train bore him eastward and nine o'clock found him landed at a little station called Seabrook.

The dismal little building was set in a field of clover, around which a road wound away among the mounds of verdure.

After a glance around, Mr. Faxon took this road, and walked slowly along. The robins hopped across it; the bobolinks sang in the trees over it. The unassuming white clover among the grass perfumed the cool morning air.

He passed only a few houses, but he observed them attentively. They were all old and humble farm houses. Apparently, this property which had, by the foreclosure of a mortgage, fallen to Mr. Faxon, was not situate in a very rich or enterprising neighborhood.

When he had walked nearly a mile, he came to a green dooryard, among widespread apple trees, with a well-sweep among them, and a residence, though plain, more pretentious and comfortable than the others.

There was a narrow, well-worn path among the short grass and buttercups to the porch, where a bitter sweet twined its strong arms. In a corner, under the verdure, was an arm-chair, with a book on the seat, and a cane lying across it—a gnarled, twisted stick of hickory, that Mr. Faxon looked twice at. The book he saw was a Bible.

There was an old lady, with a sweet, faded face, and snowy cap strings tied under her double chin, knitting at a window near by, but his quiet step had not disturbed her.

He had put his hand to the knocker; he took it down again as he caught sight of his pallid face. He stood there quite still for several minutes. A gray cat came and rubbed against his leg. Some apple-blossoms, floating down, touched his cheek.

At length the gentle lips moved.

'Father,' said the mild old lady, 'you had best lie down and take a rest.'

'Such old people, and I have come to take their home away,' said Mr. Faxon.

There was a strong pain in his dark face now as he stood looking down at the porch floor.

After a moment, he stepped off the porch, on the further side, and walked away under the apple trees.

When Mr. Faxon came back from his brief stroll, his presence, as he crossed the yard, was observed.

A white-haired old man, who had come to the open door and taken up the hickory stick, turned back hastily, with a few hurried words, and the aged woman dropped her knitting and rose up, with a paleness dropping over her face.

But, while Mr. Faxon hesitated on the porch again, both came to the door. Sad, startled faces they both had, but they were civil. Their greeting was kindly, as to a friend.

'My name is Faxon,' said the visiter. 'I—'

'We know who you be, sir, said the old man—'we know who you be, though we never seed ye before. Will you come in?'

Mr. Faxon stepped across the white hall floor into the quaint, cool and comfortable sitting room.

The rough blue paper, like chintz, on the wall, some 'honesty' and dried grasses in opaque white vases upon the high, narrow mantlepiece, unconsciously struck his eye, while he took a seat, his mind occupied with other thoughts.

'We've been long expectin' you, sir,' said the old lady, gently.

Her hands, crossed upon her spotless gingham apron upon her lap, trembled a little, but the serenity of her manner was not much changed.

But the old man's eyes swam in tears. He rested both hands on the hickory stick between his knees, as he sat in a corner, and bending his forehead upon them, partially hid his face.

'Yes! yes! but it comes sort 'o sudden now, said the old man.

Mr. Faxon sat in speechless sympathy.

After a little pause, old Mr. Derby looked up, and met his eyes.

'Of course, its all right, sir. We don't question your right to the places but we've been sort of unfortunate. I think so—don't you, mother?

The old lady lay back among the cushions of the dimity-covered chair. She had a look of physical weakness Mr. Faxon had not observed before. She did not speak.

'It's not for myself I care—it's her!' he cried, striking his cane violently upon the floor. 'She helped earn this place when she was young. There was no kind o' work but what them hands you see lyin' so weary now in her lap, sir, was put to. She was up early an' late, always a-doin', a doin for me and the children. God never made a better wife an' mother. An' now, sir, it's hard, it's hard, that she should be turned out of her home in her old age.'

'Hush, hush, Daniel!' said the old lady, softly. 'The Lord will provide, and it's not long we have to stay in the world, you know.'

'Will you tell me the history of the place, Mr. Derby?' asked Mr. Faxon. 'How did you come to lose it.'

'It was mortgaged, sir,' said the old man, at last, 'to pay the boys' college bills. You see, we had three children—Selwyn Roscoe and little Annie. Mother an' I didn't have any eddication, but we said all along that our children should have; an' they went to the district school an' then the academy—and by-and-by we fitted them off for college. Bright, smart boys they were—everybody said my boys had good parts, though Roe was always a little wild. I think mother there loved him better for that. He was more trouble, an' she clung to him closer because others blamed him at times. Annie, his sister, was always a pleadin', too, for Roe. He played truant, and he whipped the boys who told on him; he was always pullin' his bones in peril, an' twice he was half drowned—yet in spite of all he was ready for college when Selwyn was, though Selwyn was steady as a clock. Mother and I hid been scrapin' together for years, and at last we fitted them off.'

'We went on denying ourselves, for it was just the one hope of our lives to have the boys graduate with all the honors; an' time went on, but many of the crops failed, and there came disappointment here and disappointment there, an' failing to get together the money the boys sent for—especially Roe—we mortgaged the farm for five hundred dollars.

They were nearly through, you see an' mother and Annie thought that Selwyn might be principal of the academy or something else when he came home, an' Roe would be a lawyer, 'cause he could argufy an' speak so smart in public, an' the money would be paid back easy.

'But from time to time there came rumors I didn't like, as to how Roscoe was up to his old wild ways again, and at last it came like a thunderbolt—Roe was suspended and had run away to foreign parts. Well, I pass over that, sir; I tried not to be hard on the boy. Then Selwyn came home. He had graduated well, but had a bad cough. But he didn't complain, but he was thin an' pale an' mother an' I saw that the son we meant to rely on was an invalid on our hands. The thought struck me dumb. But mother was all energy. We traveled here with him, we traveled there. We saw all the noted doctors, East and West. We borrowed more money on the old place, and we never paid any back. I had made one or two payments at first, but they were but a drop in the bucket. At last we brought Selwyn home to die.

'Don't Daniel!' said the mother softly.

'He wants to hear the rest. There's only a little more, but its no better. An' he was like Selwyn—good an' patient, delicate-like too. We didn't mind it at first, but her cheeks grew thin an' too red; a cough she had had from her child hood grew harder, and though the best doctors we could get came early an' late it was only a year after Selwyn died till we laid Annie down among the snows. Thank ye, sir, for your pity! Mother an' I have shed most of our tears.

Mr. Faxon put his cambric handkerchief back into his pocket.

'Your other son, Roscoe Mr. Derby—did he never come home?

'Never. Its nigh eight years since we have seen Roe. He knew he disappointed us? but that was nothin to us—was it mother?'

'I never think of it,' said Mrs. Derby shaking her head. 'Perhaps—I don't know—we took the wrong course with Roe. He was restless and active. He was wild, but he was lovin'—

Her voice broke.

'Mrs. Derby,' said Mr. Faxon, 'I find I know something of your story already. Your son, Roscoe Derby, who ran away at nineteen years old, is probably living, and it may come in my way to obtain some information of him for you.'

The old people had risen eagerly from their seats, but he went on, quickly:

'Meanwhile, be at no inconvenience regarding your stay here in your old home. Your right to occupy it is unquestioned in my mind, and let me assure you that you will never, during your lifetimes, be required to go hence. There is the mortgage'—the Derby place is your own.

He rose, putting them gently back, as they pressed toward him, trying to express their gratitude.

'No—no thanks! Believe me you owe me nothing.'

He took his hat. The old man, who was voiceless, wrung his hand. Mr. Faxon turned to Mrs. Derby, and taking her soft, wrinkled fingers in his strong palm, bent low and kissed them. Then he turned toward the door, but in a moment he came back.

'Mother—father!' he said. 'I cannot go, for I know you have forgiven me!'

And the next instant the strong man was kneeling with his head on his mother's knee.

'After long years, mother,' he said, as she stroked the temples with fond fingers. 'I am but twenty eight years old, but sorrow from my early faults has brought some gray hairs about my head.'

And you are not Mr. Faxon, after all, dear?' said the father, with a puzzled smile.

'Yes, I am, dear father. Five years ago I had the good fortune to gain the good will of one of the wealthiest American shipping merchants then in London. He gave me a good position, and I decided to return home with him, and served faithfully in his employ, until just before his death, when, having formed an engagement to his only daughter, he gave his consent to our marriage, with the proviso that I would take his name, and carry on his interests exactly as they had been. To this I consented, for in spite of settled habits and ideas, I felt an alien and alone; but, mother, I have a good wife and the best of sons—a little fellow two years old named Derby. Does that pleas you?'

Ah, indeed! What loving old woman is not pleased with her grandchild? Soon the house was graced by the presence of Violet Faxon and the lovely boy, whom grandfather could not praise enough and grandmother could not fondle enough; yet it was sweeter, perhaps to Roscoe Faxon to hear his mother's voice whisper:

'I like your wife and do you know, dear, I think she is very like Annie?'

"Peace in the family." You can enjoy a good night's rest and retain peace in the family by keeping Dr. Bull's Baby syrup in the house.

Woman's Fear of Cows.

It is now over 100 years since an American philosopher propounded the query "Why is a woman afraid of a cow?" and yet no one has succeeded in giving a satisfactory answer. There is once and a while a woman who doesn't seem to have the slightest fear, even when passing a cow with one horn all twisted out of shape; but follow that woman home and you will find that she kicks the dog, cuffs the children, jaws her husband, and knows how to sharpen a butcher knife and use an ax. The real woman has a mortal terror of cows, and the real cow seems to have an antipathy toward her. Friday afternoon a lady was walking down Cass avenue when she suddenly came upon a cow. The animal was feeding upon the other side of the street, and the boy sent out to watch her sat under a shade tree and was playing on a mouth organ.

The lady halted.

The cow looked up.

'Lost anything, ma'am?' asked the boy as he moved the music from his mouth.

'I—I am afraid of that cow!' she replied.

'What for?' Cows don't bite nor kick, same as a horse. All they kin do is to run their horns through you and pin you to the ground.'

'Oh my!—she's coming!'

'Oh, she hain't. She is just making believe that she wants to get at ye and hook ye over the fence.

'Oh! but I dare not pass!'

'Yes, you dare. Cows know when a woman is afraid just as well as anybody. The minit you give cows to understand that you are able to catch 'em by the heels and mop the ground with 'em they go to huntin' for clover.'

'Dear me, but I guess I'll go back.'

'I wouldn't. If ye'll only spit on yer hands and shake yer fist at her, she'll wilt right down. Cows know who's boss, just as well as men do. Now, then, I'll hold yer parasol while you spit on your hands.

'Oh! I can't—I am going right away home!'

'Well, my little brother he swares at 'em instead of spitting on his hands. See if you can do that.

'No no no! I'm going now!'

'If I was a woman, and I couldn't swear or spit on my hands, I should carry a sword cane to stab cows with,' observed the boy as he looked across the way.

'My soul! but there's another cow up there!' exclaimed the lady, as she looked up the street.

'Yes, lots of cows around these days; but I never heard of two cows attacking a woman at once. I guess one generally hooks 'em all to pieces first, and then the other comes up and paws at the mangled remains. If you—'

The lady uttered a first class scream and made a jump for the nearest gate. It opened hard, and after one pull she went over the fence and up the front steps of a strange house, there to remain till her husband could be summoned by telephone to come and act as a body guard.

'I'd just like to be a woman,' mused the boy, as he sat down to punish his mouth-organ some more. 'I'd carry a bowie-knife down the back of my neck, and the first cow that tried to hook me would feel that ere knife playing mumbledy-peg around her vicious heart-strings.

Father is Getting Well.

My daughters say, "How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters." He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable, and we are so glad that he used your Bitters.—A lady of Rochester, N. Y.—Utica Herald.

In a recent lecture on the possibility of foretelling earthquakes, Professor Palmer believes that by means of seismographic stations, telegraphically connected for registering and reporting preliminary earth tremblings it would be possible to foretell earthquakes just as tempests are now foretold, and to issue warnings to threatened districts about three days in advance. He did not expect to live to see such a system in operation, but he hoped and in a measure expected that posterity would be benefited by its universal and permanent establishment.

Is Insanity Rapidly Increasing?

It is often asserted and very generally believed that insanity has been greatly on the increase, both in this country and Europe during recent years. The strain of modern life upon the nervous system and its heavier demands upon all the faculties are held responsible for a growth in the tendency to mental aberration which is regarded as alarming. And unquestionably we hear much more about insanity and the treatment of the insane than we did a generation ago. But it must be remembered that only within a generation have we begun to take especial care of the insane, and until recent years no attempt has been made to find out what proportion of the population they form. Even now the statistics of insanity are very imperfect. We are unable to say, for instance, with even a tolerable degree of accuracy, how many insane there are in the United States or in the several states, and we have no figures which enable us to give the proportion of cures effected even in the asylums for the treatment of lunatics. In those countries and communities, however, where we are unable to compare the number of the insane who have become a public charge during successive decades, we do, indeed, find an an enormous increase, which seems to justify the very common belief in the frightful growth of lunacy in our time.

In England, in 1859, with a population of 19,686,701, there were known 187 insane and idiotic persons to each 100,000 of the inhabitants, or one in every 535. In 1875 the number had increased to 271 in every 100,000, or one in each 365. In France the number of insane in the asylums nearly quadrupled between 1835 and 1870, and also increased from 31.6 in each 100,000 of the population to 100.3, or very nearly three-times. In Paris alone the admission to insane asylums increased more than sixfold between 1800 and 1876, while in the same time the population was scarcely trebled. In Massachusetts the number of the insane in the asylums has increased in 59 years from 50 to 2,776, and the rate proportionately to the population has augmented more than eighteen times. The number of insane in the State at present who are not in asylums is also estimated to be between 1,000 and 1,500.

This certainly looks as if insanity was on the increase at an alarming rate, but Dr. Chares F. Folsom, from whom we obtained these figures, gives reasons to show that the increase is rather apparent than real. His discussion of the subject was in the form of a lecture to the graduating class of the Harvard Medical School.

In the first place, the definition of insanity is much wider now than it used to be. Less than fifty years ago the capability of repeating the multiplication table was gravely propounded in an English court at a test of sanity in a case involving a large sum of money. This was at a time when a lunatic was a person to be chained like a wild beast. Indeed, until the beginning of this century the courts almost universally held that to be executed from punishment on the ground of insanity a man must be deprived of all memory and understanding, and no more knows what he is

FOR REPRESENTATIVES,

T. JEFF. VANDERSLICE,
JOSEPH B. KNITTLE,

FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY,

ROBERT R. LITTLE.

Senator David Davis is for Hancock.

Ex-Governor Bigler died at Clearfield on Monday last. He was elected Governor of this State by the Democrats, and held many other prominent positions.

And now the cry of fraud comes from Alabama. The Democrats carried the State last week by a majority of 60,000, against the united republicans, greenbackers, and independents. Of course, the Democrats either killed or intimidated about 75,000 negro voters, which changed the result. The same kind of intimidation will be found everywhere this fall.

Important to Democratic Voters.

The attention of the Democrats throughout the county is especially called to the following dates.

Last day for being Assessed or Registered—THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1880.

Last day for payment of taxes—SATURDAY, OCTOBER, 2 1880.

Election—TUESDAY NOVEMBER 2, 1880.

Peter Cooper, candidate for President, Samuel F. Carey, candidate for Vice-President, on the Greenback ticket in 1876, Hendrick B. Wright Greenback congressman from Luzerne county, have all declared in favor of Hancock. Thus are the ranks constantly being filled by accessions from all parties.

THE CANDIDATES.

We publish the names of the nominees of the Democratic party of Col. co., this week. It is unnecessary to say anything about them at this time, as all have been before the people before, and are well known.

So far as we know the nominations were fairly made, and the candidates are entitled to the support of every Democrat. Experience has taught that it is not safe for anyone to assume that a nomination is equivalent to an election in this county. Candidates are expected to work not only for themselves, but for the whole ticket, National State and county, from this time until the election.

Now that the Convention has been held, it is time that the two wings of the Democratic party in this county should drop their personal differences, and work together for the success of the whole ticket. That there are two wings is an undisputed fact, and that the only question between them is as to which shall control the party machinery is also a fact. This difference resulted last year in the nomination and subsequent defeat of a candidate of one wing, and this year in the nomination of a candidate for Assembly by the other wing, and there is already some talk of an effort to defeat him at the polls. A bird flies high when its wings flop in unison, otherwise it falls to the ground. Let us take warning.

CONVENTION NOTES.

South Conyngham cast but two votes in Convention for Representative, because the voters of that district chose to instruct for Mr Vanderslice alone. They did not choose to vote for a second candidate and by rule uninstructed delegates are not permitted to vote. This limitation was adopted some years since in convention to prevent the complaint that a few uninstructed delegates could always control the result as they pleased in any close contest, which would be unfair to other districts and lead to intrigue if not corruption in nominations.

In other cases in Convention a candidate was allowed to receive only the whole proper vote of a district and no more; for to allow him a doubled vote would be plainly wrong. That would be to allow him the votes that can only be given to a second candidate where two are to be nominated together, which is the case as to representatives and county commissioners.

The nomination of representatives for a second term has been the usage in this county, and in the few instances where it has been departed from, the departure has been a subject of complaint. The reasons in any case for disregarding this usage ought to be very clear and strong.

The Congressional and Senatorial nominations (so far as this county acts alone) were settled by the voters at the primary elections. It only remained for the Convention to verify results by receiving and announcing the returns, and then to appoint conferees. Following this action the table of voting for the whole county, now published, will show how each candidate was supported in each district, and that he had fairly and justly allotted to him his share of the convention vote.

Mr. Little, the District Attorney, is to be congratulated upon his renomination. It was so perfectly clear that he had been a faithful officer, that his name was placed upon the ticket by common consent.

The editors of the Republican were conspicuously present in Convention, and give, for them, a pretty fair report of the proceedings. Sitting under the handsome Hancock pictures seems to have improved their temper!

As the republicans do not yet seem to have a clear idea who is their candidate for Vice-President, we again inform them that it is Chester A. Arthur, late collector of customs at the port of New York. And in giving them that information we furnish them also with the following testimonial of character. They should cut it out and paste it in their hats. It is from Sherman's letter to President Hayes, January 28 1879.

"But it is to be held that, to procure the removal of Mr. Arthur, it is sufficient to reasonably establish that gross abuses of administration have continued and increased during the incumbency; that many persons have been regularly paid on his rolls who rendered little or no service; that the expenses of his office have increased, while collections have been diminishing; that gratuities in the nature of bribes, have been received by his subordinates in the Custom House; the efforts to correct these abuses have not met his support, and that he has not given to the duties of the office the requisite diligence and attention, then it is submitted that the case is made out. This form of proof the department is prepared to submit.

The Honorable William D. Kelly, who is turning summersaults on the tariff tight rope to distract attention from the free trade record of Mr. James A. Garfield, has done business with this same Mr. Garfield before to-day. They were together when Oakes Ames was dividing the plunder of the government by the Union Pacific railroad. The committee, a majority of whom were republicans, in their report to congress find the cases of Judge Kelley, of Pennsylvania, and of Mr. Garfield very similiar in the evidence, and the committee in their findings detail the transactions of Mr. Kelley and then attach it with a "ditto" to Mr. Garfield. The committee say:

"They can find from the evidence that in the early part of the second session of the Fortieth Congress, and probably in December, 1867, Mr. Ames agreed with Mr. Kelley to sell him ten shares of Credit Mobilier stock at par and interest from July 1, 1867. Mr. Kelley was not then prepared to pay for his stock, and Mr. Ames agreed to carry his stock until he could pay for it. On the third day of January, 1868, there was a dividend of 80 per cent. on Credit Mobilier stock in Union Pacific bonds. Mr. Ames received, the bonds as the stock stood in his name and sold them for 75 per cent. of their face. In June, 1868, there was a cash dividend of 60 per cent. which Mr. Ames also received. The proceeds of the bonds sold and the cash dividend received by Mr. Ames amounted to $1 376. The par value of the stock and interest thereon from the previous July amounted to $1,047, so that after paying for the stock there was a balance of dividends due Mr. Kelley of $329. On the twenty third day of June, 1868, Mr. Ames gave Mr. Kelley a check for that sum on the Sergeant-at-arms of the House of Representatives and Mr. Kelley received the money thereon. The committee find that Mr. Kelley understood that the money he thus received was a balance of dividends due him after paying for the stock. * * * The facts in regard to Mr. Garfield as found by the committee are identical with the case of Mr. Kelley to the point of the reception of the check for $329. He agreed with Mr. Ames to take ten shares of the Credit Mobilier stock but did not pay for the same. Mr. Ames received the 80 per cent. dividend in bonds, sold them for 90 per cent. and also received the 60 per cent. cash dividend, which altogether with the price of the stock and interest left a balance of $329. This sum was paid over to Mr Garfield by a check on the Sergeant at-arms. Mr. Ames received all the subsequent dividends and the committee do not find since the payment of the $329 there has been any communication between Mr. Ames and Mr. Garfield on the subject until the investigation began."

The committee in their long report explained how the Credit Mobilier was but little better than the outright conversion of the property given by the government to the Union Pacific road into private purses.

How Aliens Become Voters.

Every supporter of Hancock and English who requires naturalization papers to enable him to vote, should attend to the matter at once; and all friends should see that no vote is lost by negligence. Here-under is an abstract of the law, and some suggestions on the subject.

An alien is required to reside in the United States five years, two years of which time must be after filing a declaration of intention; but when an alien has been a resident three years before reaching the age of twenty-one, he need not file a declaration. Residence must be proved to the satisfaction of the court, by competent witnesses. One year's residence in the State is required, but it need not be the year last past. Soldiers are entitled to full papers after one year's residence. Minor children become citizens by naturalization of the father or widowed mother. If an alien files a declaration, but dies before naturalization, his widow and children become entitled to all rights of citizens upon taking the oath required by law. A child born in a foreign land is a citizen if the father be a citizen.

Certificates of naturalization can only be obtained in open court; and all requiring them should be in attendance at September term.

Declaration of intention can be filed at any time in the Prothonotary's office and those who have neglected it, should now file them.

Those who filed declaration in other counties or States, can get full papers here by showing first papers; and if these are not in hand, copies can be obtained by mail from any part of the Union.

Colonel Forney as a Democratic Recruiting Officer.

There are three classes of men that are daily joining the Hancock column, North and South, exclusive of the Union veterans.

These are the republicans of the Charles Sumner school, the republicans and democrats of the Douglas school who voted for Abraham Lincoln, and the republicans who have grown tired of the rings of the North and the carpet-baggers of the South. I receive letters every day from men of one or the other of these classes. On Saturday, July 24, 1880, I received several. One is from Daniel R. Goodloe, a republican of the old school, a Southern Abolitionist for thirty years, a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln and one of the ablest republican writers during the war. He was an Emancipation Commissioner under Lincoln, and has held many offices of trust and honor. I was associated with him in journalism at the time when to be a republican editor was not to be called on constantly to advocate doubtful measures and to whiten odious and inferior politicians

Philo A. Orton, the Wisconsin Democrat who has come out for Garfield, explains that his strong reason for doing so is that Garfield is a Free Trader.

Yet here in Columbia county there are men who are going for this same Congressman Garfield because he is a tariff man.

TANNER'S APPETITE.

COMPLETION OF THE FORTY DAYS FAST.

Dr. Tanner completed his forty days fast at noon last Saturday. At 7 o'clock in the morning he had a fit of vomiting. He got up and dressed, but at 7:30 he was very much exhausted and laid in his cot for three hours A visit from his brother-in law seemed to make him nervous and he complained of "goneness" in his stomach, and afterwards he walked around the room. At 11 o'clock he was standing at a window looking down on the crowd Shortly before 12 o'clock a large table of watermelons, fruits, bread, etc. were spread in the hall.

Just before noon his weight was one hundred and twenty-one and a half pounds, a loss of thirty six pounds in forty days; temperature 98; pulse 92, and respiration 17.

At precisely 12 o'clock the signal being a whistle from a neighboring factory, the crowd of a thousand people inside the hall and an immense crowd outside cheered Dr. Tanner enthusiastically and he waved his handkerchief in response. At that moment he had a peach in his hand, but some one snatched it away from him. He immediately drank a glass of milk and called for the Georgia watermelon. He dug his hands in the latter and ate heartily of it

Placing the glass to his mouth he said: "Gentlemen, you don't believe that's good." He left the hall in a carriage at 12:15 and was driven to the residence of Dr. Gunn, where he will undergo medical treatment.

On leaving the hall the doctor walked unassisted down stairs with a slice of melon in his hand. He received an ovation from the crowd. He joked and talked with those about the vehicle and expressed much gratification at the hearty reception. Finally the attendants had to hold him in his seat fearing a reaction from over exertion.

Arriving at Dr. Gunn's house he lay down in the front parlor and endeavored to sleep. So far the milk and watermelon had not disagreed with him. Dr. Gunn himself is ill through over exertion.

At 3:20 Friday afternoon Dr. Tanner's pulse was 82; his bodily temperature was 99 degrees; his respiration 13 per minute and the strength of the grip of his right hand was recorded as 78 kilogrammes, while that of his left was 72. His weight was 122. About 3:30 o'clock the faster made a descent from his gallery. Instead of walking, however, he bolted straight through the throng in attendance to the ante-room of the hall on the north side. This was cleared from visitors. The doctor's purpose in moving from the gallery was to get fresher air. There was placed in front of the window a table and on top of it was placed a rocking chair. A wood en bottom chair was set beside the table and Dr. Tanner, now on the last day of his fast, mounted the table with its aid and seated himself on the rocking chair. The window was opened and he had the door of the ante-room opened to allow a draft through the hall. The doorway was filled with eager faces. "Send those people away!" shouted the faster, pounding the iron end of his cane on the table underneath him. The door was shut. Soon afterwards there was some discontent expressed in the hall. A report was brought to Dr. Tanner that one man was insisting on getting his money back if he could not see the faster. "Don't let him go out," said Dr. Tanner: let him come in here and see me." Soon there was a line of visitors filing through the ante-room Dr. Tanner's position on the table was taken for the sake of getting fresh air, but it served admirably for the purpose of exhibiting. Resting on the seat and leaning against the back of the chair by which he had mounted to the table was a large piece of pasteboard, bearing the following inscription "Positively no questions answered by Dr. Tanner or the physicians on watch. This rule will be strictly enforced."

Dr. Tanner was very happy in the evening. He walked several times around the room, talking and chatting to everyone and felt better, it was generally agreed, than he had several days before. He returned from an evening drive at 7:30 o'clock and was met by a throng at the stairs. For their benefit he walked three times around the hall and smiled and bowed. He carried an ebony stick. He had two slight stomach disturbances in the evening but got to sleep readily and at midnight was resting peacefully.

Our friends at Central, Coles Creek, and other points, who called upon us last week in Benton will please accept thanks for their favors.

There was a very pleasant Sunday school picnic in the grove at Stillwater last Saturday.

There was a large attendance and full vote at the delegate election here on Saturday afternoon. It looked like a general election.

Owing to the absence of the editor, last week, several matters that should have been published were inadvertently omitted.

The Bloomsburg Cornet Band will hold a festival on Friday and Saturday evenings, August 21st and 22nd.

WANTED—Kindling wood wanted at this office on subscription. The wood should be cut from 12 to 15 inches in length, any thickness. Market price will be paid.

LOST.—A letter containing a $24 00 order or check was lost in the Opera House on Tuesday last. The finder will please return to this office and oblige the owner, as it will be of no value to any one else.

Water was pumped in the main pipes on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. H. Birkenbine turned on the stream and started the pumps. Every thing worked nicely. The pipes are being tested this week.

The barn on the premises of Martin Ernst, in Locust township, was destroyed by fire on Monday afternoon about two o'clock. The loss of the barn and contents is about $300. We have not learned whether there was any insurance. It is supposed that the fire was started by some children.

A Garfield and Arthur club was organized by the republicans last Saturday night, in the rooms at the City Hotel. A speech or two was made, but the applause was inaudible. After putting down the names of all the men and boys who were present, and the names of a good many more who the managers thought ought to have been there, the list contained something over a hundred names. The Hancock club numbers over three hundred, and is still growing.

A number of persons voted at the delegate election last Saturday, who never voted the Democratic ticket, and do not intend to do so this fall. Some of them joined the Garfield club that same evening. Such action is neither honest nor smart. It is just as wrong in the person who solicits the vote, as in him who votes. We do not know in whose interest these votes were cast, but all good Democrats will agree that the candidate who secures delegates by such means ought not to be nominated. Fortunately, this irregularity made no difference in the general result, but the thing should be closely watched hereafter.

The Hancock and English club met in Caldman's hall on Wednesday evening, 11th inst. D. Lowenberg, chairman of Equipment committee reported that the caps and capes had arrived and that the remainder of equipments will be here in a few days.

The President called attention to the decoration of the hall and instructed the chairman of the decoration committee to see that the hall be decorated without delay. On motion, two additional names were appointed on the decoration committee.

After some discussion concerning the necessary expenses of the campaign, the President introduced C. B. Brockway, who addressed the club in an encouraging manner. President Freeze followed in an address which plainly showed the issues of the campaign and Garfield's record as a free trader. The club then adjourned to meet August 18, at 8 p. m.

On motion the petition was received and ordered filed. On motion Newton Boone, Joseph Garrison and R. Harris were nominated Collectors for the present year. Herring was directed to purchase a hose carriage.

FIFTH BALLOT.

Vanderslice,	44	Dewitt,	27½
Knittle,	44½

Only 116 votes were cast, and the chair announced the meaning of the rule to be that it takes one-third of the convention vote as polled to nominate. Messrs. Vanderslice and Knittle having more than one-third the vote polled were declared the nominees.

R. R Little was declared the nominee for District Attorney, having secured all the votes cast for that office. The convention then adjourned.

The attendance was large, and everything passed off quietly and harmoniously.

Mothers, don't fail to have Sine's Dysentery Compound on hand, for the relief of your little baby when attacked with any bowel complaint. It contains no morphine nor opium, yet its soothing effect will give the little sufferer so much relief, that he will at once fall into a gentle sleep, and give his mother an opportunity to rest, as well as every provoked bachelor of the house. aug 6-1m

We do not know that an honorary degree or any other kind, from a Baptist institution would make us a good Baptist, any more than degrees from Methodist schools make good Methodists of some men. The acceptance of an honorary membership in a Free Trade club is a very different thing from the acceptance of a literary degree. The Republican's comparison is not a good one.

It is sad and true that many children have filled untimely graves, by the neglect of their mothers to have Sines' Syrup of Tar, Hoarhound and Wild Cherry on hand. Every mother has a bottle this season of the year for immediate use. aug6 1m

The first number of The Industrial Progress, a Greenback campaign paper, is on our table. Who the editor or publisher is, does not anywhere appear, but J. M. Hower is announced as manager. Mechanically, the paper is not a model of perfection. The make-up is badly arranged and the press work is not clear. So far as the subject matter is concerned, it is all right from a Greenback standpoint, but unsound from any other. The paper will no doubt improve as those connected with it get more experience in the business. We wish them success in their undertaking, pecuniarily speaking, but from the limited number of Greenbackers in this county, we fear that the experiment will prove that such an organ cannot be sustained here.

J. M. Freck, of Centralia, is now in Arizona, where he is superintendent and principal owner of a large copper and silver mine. With Mr. Freck are interested several prominent Schuylkill capitalists. Of the mines owned and operated by them ten assays from the Merrimac averaged as follows: $343.48 in silver and $351.89 in gold, the former mine showing a solid vein four and one-half feet wide of milling ore, the latter disclosing a vein some three feet wide. They are within a short distance of the Southern Pacific railroad, and in richness are said to excel any yet discovered in the world. There are a number of laborers and prospectors on a smaller scale than Mr. Freck and his friends from Schuylkill county working in that neighborhood.—Ashland Advocate.

The festival held at Asbury on the evening of the 24th ult., went off finely, resulting in a net profit of about fifty dollars. Miss Hattie Zaner got the cake with the silver dollar in it. There were two ladies taken up and voted for and Miss Zaner got the most votes. M. W. McHenry, of Stillwater, got the cake with the two dollar and 50 cent gold piece.

We propose organizing a Hancock club on next Saturday evening at the State school house, and expect some able speakers from Wilkes-Barre. Republicans, look out for the Fishingcreek confederacy, they are getting in earnest, but don't expect any military mobs to interfere with our civil meeting.

Since the English gentlemen as well as the Messrs. It has a wonderful effect. aug6 1m Alfred M. Winterstein, son of William Winterstein, of Hemlock, died suddenly at Rochester, Minnesota, on July 26th. He had been suffering from chills and fever, and in the afternoon procured some powders, one of which he took in a cup of coffee, and then went to bed. On going to his room to call him for supper, the landlord found him in an unconscious state. The next day he died. A coroner's jury found that he came to his death from natural causes, the powder taken being nothing but quinine. He was a single man and his age was 30 years. He was buried at Rochester before his friends here received the sad intelligence of his death.

Robert's Horse Powders were formerly used amongst the runners and other valuable horses but now since the price has been reduced to 25 cents per package, all can afford to use them. aug6 1m

Col. Forney's Criticism on the Letters of Acceptance.

General Hancock's letter accepting the Democratic nomination for the Presidency is such a paper as a straightforward man ought to write. Happily he has nothing to explain, and, unburdened by jobs, unfettered by committals, he can afford to be outspoken and truthful. His character will be to hundreds of thousands his best platform.

Mr. Garfield's letter was a Delphic oracle, neither intended to be understood by him, or easily understood by others. A modern Presidential platform has been to many men a French guillotine, ending in several cases by cutting off the very heads of the people who ride upon it or write letters supporting it. In General Hancock's case his acceptance is as clear as light, and people will read it with the more pleasure because it is well written, genial, and full of old fashioned sense.

The Democratic candidate for Vice-President, Mr. English, has elaborated a good point. It is time for a change of administration. No party ever began with so magnificent a prologue, none is ever destined to end with so barren a sequel. Its proportions were simply magnificent when it espoused the cause of the country, but an organization which has lost in succession nearly all its architects, and has generally become part of a great kite floated by a few selfish politicians, has fairly outlived its day.

At its inception it was the war party, when everybody wanted war; to-day it is the war party when everybody wants peace. The country was never more healthy, and yet these republican leaders insist that it was never more consumptive. The credit of the nation was never higher, and yet they argue that it is the interest of the Democrats to destroy that credit. No candidate ever had a brighter record, than Hancock, few so broad, and yet the republican leaders insist that it is black and doubtful. The difference between the two parties to-day is exactly the reverse of what it was in 1860. Then the Democrats were divided and the Republicans united; to day the republicans are discordant and the Democrats solid. And this difference is broadened by the letters of acceptance of the four candidates of the two parties. The republicans are delphic and revengeful, blatant in doctrine and emphatic only in malignant hatred of eight millions of our own people. The Democrats, clear, positive, tolerant, and practical.

The declaration of the Democratic National convention endorsed by both the candidates, in the explicit language of General Hancock himself, is as follows. This is the kernal of the whole situation, and should remove all doubt or hesitancy from every patriotic mind: "The thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States, embodying the result of the war, are inviolable. If called to the Presidency, I should deem it my duty to resist with all my power any attempt to impair or evade the full force and effect of the Constitution, which in every article, section and amendment, is the supreme law of the land.

HOW TO GET almost Everything.

Do you know how to get in the easiest way and to best advantage what you want for dress and house-furnishing?

First, how: Write for a catalogue; see what you can learn from it about the things you want. If samples can be useful to you, ask for them and state your wants so plainly that exactly the right samples can be sent.

Second, where: The place where goods are kept in the greatest variety; where they are sold for what they really are in respect to quality; where prices are lowest; where most care is taken to serve customers acceptably; and where you have the right to return whatever is not satisfactory.

There—no matter where you are—if you make your wants known and avail yourself of your privileges, you will get the best things in the best way, promptly and without trouble or risk; sometimes by mail, sometimes by express, almost always at less cost for carriage than the money you save in the price.

THE BALD HEAD'S FRIEND.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!

CARBOLINE!

A Deodorized extract of Petroleum,

The Only Article that Will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.

What the World has been Wanting for Centuries.

The greatest discovery of our day, so far as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is CARBOLINE, an article prepared from petroleum, and which effects a complete and radical cure in case of baldness, or where the hair, owing to diseases of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It is also a speedy restorative, and while its use secures a luxuriant growth of hair, it also brings back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction in the using. The falling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which nourish the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and the change must begin under the scalp to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and, like many other wonderful discoveries, it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results; but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was in far-off Russia that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a Government officer having noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when trimming the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-besmeared hands in his scanty locks, and the result was in a few months a much finer head of black, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil was tried on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The manes and even the tails of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the prematurely bald and gray, as no one in civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of one of our chemists has overcome the difficulty, and by a process known only to himself, he has, after very elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing refined petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as delicately as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments with the deodorized liquid on the human hair were attended with the most astonishing results. A few applications, where the hair was thin and falling, gave remarkable tone and vigor to the scalp and hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the liquid so searching in its nature, seems to penetrate to the roots at once, and set up a radical change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and, by some mysterious operation of nature, the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful light-brown color to the hair which by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice.

We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburgh Commercial of Oct. 22, 1877.

The article is telling its own story in the hands of thousands who are using it with the most gratifying and encouraging results.

W. H. HAMILTON & Co., Fifth Avenue Pharmacy, says: "We have sold preparations for the hair for upward of twenty years, but have never had one to sell as well or give such universal satisfaction. We therefore recommend it with confidence to our friends and the general public."

Mr. GUSTAVUS F. HALL, of the Oates Opera Troupe, writes: "After six weeks' use I am convinced, as are also my comrades, that your 'Carboline' has and is producing a wonderful growth of hair where I had none for years."

C. H. SMITH, of the Jennie Hight Combination, writes: "After using your 'Carboline' three weeks I am convinced that bald heads can be 're-haired.' It's simply wonderful in my case."

B. F. ARTHUR, Shamokin, Holyoke, Mass., writes: "Your 'Carboline' has restored my hair after everything else had failed."

JOSEPH E. POWS, attorney-at-law, No. Attleboro, Mass., writes: "For more than 20 years a portion of my head has been as smooth and free from hair as a billiard ball, but some eight weeks ago I was induced to try your Carboline, and the effect has been simply wonderful. Where no hair has been seen for years there now appears a thick growth, and I am convinced that by continuing the use I shall have as good a head of hair as I ever had. It is growing now nearly as rapidly as hair does after it is cut.

CARBOLINE

Is now presented to the public without fear of contradiction as the best Restorative and Beautifier of the Hair the world has ever produced.

A SOLDIER PUT IN THE GUARD-HOUSE FOR EXULTING OVER HANCOCK'S NOMINATION—STILL MORE ARBITARY MEASURES THREATENED.

The recent punishment of Kavanaugh a private at Willitt's Point, by his commander Colonel Abbot, for exhibiting joy at Hancock's nomination, has been investigated by a New York Star reporter, who gathered, after a few minutes' conversation with some of the men, that a new unprecedented order was expected from the commanding colonel and that it, was said, been already decided upon. The forthcoming order, it was supposed, would forbid every private attached to the Willett's Point voting on election day. Kavanaugh was not to be seen, but the reporter had but little difficulty in finding a soldier who informed him of the condition of affairs and the feeling of the men over such arbitary discipline. He narrated in an intelligent and straightforward manner the circumstances which led up to the present trouble:

"Several years ago," he began "General Hancock in some way conferred a favor on poor Kavanaugh, who is an artilleryman. Kavanaugh is a warm hearted, generous fellow, and never forgot it. He almost worshiped Hancock, and I tell you he's not the only man on this post who does. A short time ago Kavanaugh, while at the artillery practice, made some remarkable shooting, for which he was complimented by the General. Well, on Tuesday, week before last, Kavanaugh was at the village on some business for the post. While there he received the news of Hancock's nomination at Cincinnati. Delighted beyond measure at the success of his benefactor, he procured an American flag, and, using all dispatch in finishing his business he mounted his horse and started back to quarters. You may immagine he went through the main street of the village at a rattling pace, and whenever he met an acquaintance he called out to him that Hancock had got the nomination. The Republicans, who form a majority of the residents didn't like it a bit, and afterward I heard that they had communicated with Colonel Abbott about Kavanaugh's conduct. When Kavanaugh reached the post he told the news around among the men, and he stuck the flag out the window in honor of Hancock. He was greatly eleated but it was only natural, heartily exultation at his patron's success. There was no politics in it Kavanaugh is less of a politician than many of the men stationed at the post. The colonel, who is a republican—and a strong partisan at that—lost no time in taking Kavanaugh to task, and he was reprimanded and sent to the guard house for infringing on the rules. It was an outrage on its face, and done for a political purpose and to please the republicans in that place."

"What do you know about the order that is now spoken of, forbidding the men to vote on election day?" was asked.

"They may try to do it, but they can't," was the prompt reply. "I don't hold that the colonel or any other man, has a right to prevent the men from voting merely because they don't feel like supporting Garfield."

"I think," broke in another soldier, "this thing should be tested in the courts. If it isn't intimidation I'd like to know what it is. The men here are solid for Hancock, and while they respect their superior officers, and we are willing to obey them in all that belongs to military duty, they won't quietly yield up the privilige of American citizens—the right to vote."

The summary rebuke and punishment of Kavanaugh, which savor strongly of the martinet, not only at Willitt's Point, but elsewhere. Should any attempt be made to carry out the reported intention of the commanding offiber at the Point, to prevent the troops from votiag, the method restored to will probably be that of refusing all vacation or leave of absence to the men on election day, and ordering the guard and sentries to see that no one is permitted to leave. It is very doubtful whether such a scheme, however feasible in contemplation, will be put into practice, in view of the state of feeling that exists among the men and the unpopularity that would overtake its author as a natural consequence.

Answer This.

Did you ever know any person to be ill, without inaction of the stomach, liver or kidneys, or did you ever know one who was well when either was obstructed or inactive: and did you ever know or hear of any case of the kind that Hop Bitters would not cure? Ask your neighbor this same question.—Times.

Preserving Harness.

The first point to be observed is to keep the leather soft and pliable. This can be done only by keeping it well charged with oil and grease. Water is a destroyer of each of these. But mud and saline moisture from the animal are even more destructive. Mud in drying absorbs the grease and opens the pores of the leather, making it a ready prey to water, while the salty character of the prespiration from the animals injures the leather, stitching and mounting. It therefore follows that to preserve a harness the straps should be washed and oiled at intervals as required. To do this effectually the straps should be unbuckled and detatched, then washed with warm soft water and crown soap, and hung by a slow fire or in the sun till nearly dry, then coated with a mixture of neatsfoot oil and tallow and allowed to remain in a warm room for several hours, and when pretty dry rub with a woollen rag. The rubbing is important, as it, in addition to removing the surplus oil and greas, tends to close pores and give a finish to the leather In hanging harness care should be taken to allow all the straps to hang their full length. Light is essential to the care of leather, and when the harness closet is dark the doors should be left open at least half the time during the day. All closets should be well ventilated, and when possible be well lighted. To clean plated mountings use a chamois use a little tripoli or rotten-stone, but they should be scoured as little as possibls.

CHOLERA.—No danger from Cholera if the Liver is in proper order and ordinary prudence in diet is observed. The occasional taking of Simmons' Liver Regulator to keep the system healthy, will surely preuent the attakks of Cholera.

The Sun says: Carl Schurz did not mention Chester A. Arthur in his speech at Indianapolis; Richard W. Thompson did not mention Chester A. Arthur in his speech at Terre Haute. Gen. Arthur is the republican candidate for Vice President.

And the Bucks County Intelligencer will not even hang Arthur's picture in the window.

The Elmira Gazette says a gentlemen in that city has authorized it to state, in order to test the sincerity of the statements of bragging Republicans, that he will wager $100 that Hancock carries Penn'a; $100 that he will carry Conn.; $100 that he will carry New Jersey; $100 that he will carry Indiana; $100 that he will carry New York; $100 that he wins all the above bets; and $1,000 that Hancock will be elected. All the offers to be accepted or none.

Where False Hair Comes From.

False hair having come to be recognized as a necessity of the modern female existence, it may be of interest to learn how this constantly increasing want is supplied. Live hair bought on 'foot' (to use the technical term of the trade), constitutes but a very small percentage of the stock inmarket, as there are few women who are willing to part with their locks for money, and those who have superfluous locks to spare grow fewer year by year. When the second hand tresses were needed merely for furnishing wigs for a few elderly ladies, agents found no difficulty in securing a sufficiency among the peasant maids of Auvergne and Brittainy. The present demand, however, greatly exceeds the supply, and is asserted that Paris alone uses more than all the available crop in France, and that Marsailles (the great centre of the traffic in hair) deals with Spain, the Orient and the two Sicilies for forty tons a year of dark hair, of which she makes upwards of 65,000 chignons annually. Under the name of 'dead hair' are classed the 'combings,' which thrifty servant girls save up and sell, the clippings of barber shops, faded curls, worn out switches, etc. The scavengers of every city, both at home and abroad, value nothing short of a silver spoon among the refuse as much as a snarl of combings, however dirty, as it will find a ready sale. Such findings are afterwards washed with bran and potash, carded, sifted, classed and sorted, and then made into the cheap front curls, puffs and chignons that abound in market. Much of this enters into the cheaper grades of the 320,000 'pieces' annually made in France of which enormous trade England is said to be the best customer and America almost as good. Late reports of the commerce of Swatow, China, show that a large export trade in 'dead hair' gathered in the stalls of barbers, sprang up in 1873, during which year 18,800 pounds were exported to Europe. In 1875 the export of this refuse arose to 134,000 pounds with a commercial value of over $25,000. It is an undoubted fact, too, that pauper corpses are often despoiled of their hair to meet this same demand of an increasing commerce. Those, then, who sport other than their own natural locks, can never be sure whether these are redolent of the sepulchre, the gutter, or the servant girls' comb.

Let the poor sufferers from female complaints take courage and rejoice that a painless remedy has been found. We refer to Lydia E Pinckham's Vegetable Compound. It is prepared at 233 Western Avenue, Lynn Mass., Send to Mrs. Pinckham for pamphlets.

The Tiltons.

Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton and her mother Mrs. Joanna Morse, continue to live together at 381 Macon street, Brooklyn. Mrs. Tilton is provided for by her husband Theodore Tilton, who continues to live apart from her, and Mrs. Morse receives a support from her husband, F. B. Morse, President of the Union Ferry Company, from whom she has been separated for a number of years. Mrs. Tilton's two sons, Carroll and Ralph, continue to live with her. The former is studying for the ministry and the latter is just about to begin school life. Misses Florence and Alice Tilton remain in Stuttgart, Germany, where they are studying music and art. Their father sailed a few days since to pay his annual visit to them. Mr. Tilton's former home in Brooklyn is rented, and the occupants occasionally hold spiritualistic seances here. Mrs. Tilton leads a most secluded life.

What is the use of going to the sea side for health when "Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher" is what you need.

It isn't often that a boy wishes he were younger, but it is possible at such times as he stands up before his teacher dear and pulls off his jacket for an afternoon matinee that he longs for his earlier days when his jacket and trousers were made in one piece, precluding the possibility of such a cold blooded preparation.

Fifty Years in the Mail.

A letter has recently been delivered in France after being detained in the post office for half a century. A singular discovery was made a few weeks ago in the course of the operations now going on in the general post-office at Paris. In a panel near one of the boxes was found a letter which had been posted exactly fifty years ago, and which, by some mischance, had got stuck in the panel instead of finding its way into the box. The letter was duly forwarded to the person to whom it was addressed, who, still more strangely, was alive, and received it safely. The writer, however, had been dead many years.

For Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cramps, Cholera, AND ALL THOSE NUMEROUS TROUBLES OF THE STOMACH AND BOWELS SO PREVALENT AT THIS SEASON,

No Remedy known to the Medical Profession has been in use so long and with such uniformly satisfactory results as

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER

It has been used with such wonderful success in all parts of the world in the treatment of these difficulties, that it has come to be considered and such it really is when taken in time and according to the very plain directions inclosing each bottle.

AN UNFAILING CURE FOR ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS

In such diseases the attack is usually sudden and frequently very acute; but with a safe remedy at hand for immediate use, there is seldom danger of the fatal result which so often follows a few days' neglect.

The inclination to wait and see if the morrow does not bring a better feeling, not infrequently occasions a vast amount of needless suffering, and sometimes costs a life. A timely dose of Pain Killer will almost invariably save both, and with them the attendant doctor's fee.

It has stood the test of forty years' constant use in all countries and climates, and is perfectly safe in any person's hands.

It is recommended by Physicians, Nurses in Hospitals, and persons of all classes and professions who have had opportunity for observing the wonderful results which have always followed its use.

THE BEST EVIDENCE:

I have long used the medicine known as PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER in my family and would not on any account be without it. When Cholera was last epidemic here, I used no medicine of any sort but the Pain Killer, and although myself and several members of my family were attacked severely, I am happy to say that the Pain Killer was equal to every emergency. I consider that I am not be doing my duty to the community did I not say this much. If I were attacked by the Cholera to-day, Pain Killer would be the only remedy I should use. I have thoroughly tested it, and know it can be relied on.

F. E. BERGINSEND, Galena, Illinois.

Messrs. PERRY DAVIS & SON:

I know you need no testimonial to convince you that your medicine is all that you claim for it, but I cannot restrain the impulse to communicate to you the fact that in my family it has truly done wonders. I administer it to my children (one eighteen months, and the other three years old) with perfect success. It regulates their bowels, and stops all diarrhœa. Myself and wife resort to it in all cases, both for internal and external use. I've used it in my family for five years, and will not be without it. Feeling myself under much obligation to you, in many times being relieved from pain, I am very truly yours.

L. F. MOORE, Bangall, Dutchess Co., New York.

No family can afford to be without it, and its price brings it within the reach of all.

The use of one bottle will go further to convince you of its merits than columns of newspaper advertising. Try it, and you will never do without it.

THE GREAT MEXICAN REMEDY.

Thousands suffering from Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Liver and Kidney complaints, Scrofula and kindred diseases, will find with delight this new and wonderful discovery, which as a disease conquerer and blood purifier, has no equal in modern medicine. The cure of Mexican Hermetly was first introduced into California in 1852, where in a few months it effected so many wonderful cures as to create a demand for the same from Maine to Florida. It is the only medicine in the world that is made from the native plants, roots and herbs of Mexico. It cures all humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common blotch, pimple, or eruption, while it clears and beautifies the complexion. In diseases of the stomach, Blood, Liver and Kidneys it has permanently cured thousands of hopeless cases where all other known remedies had failed. One dose will prove any case of Sick Headache. Two doses will break up any ordinary cough or cold. Persons suffering with Heartburn, Waterbrash, sour Stomach, biliousness, Costiveness, Piles, Palpitation of the heart, Low Spirits, and kindred affections, will find the Mexican remedy a swift and sure relief. The genuine is placed before the public, under the following name:

Herbaline Bitters the Great Mexican Remedy.

Call on your druggist and get a bottle of the Mexican Remedy, and convince yourself that it is the Best Medicine in the World.

The trade supplied by John Keesbau, Wholesale Druggist, N. W. corner 6th and Walnut streets, Cincinnati, O.
